ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

I could not resist the temptation to spend a day on the Columbia river, so full of historic interest, peerless in the picturesque beauty of its surroundings. On leaving Portland we passed down the Willamette river twelve miles, before entering the Columbia which is at one point seventeen miles wide.

The scenery is grand beyond description, it seemed as though nature had combined to make this highway a marvel of grandeur. Cascades and streams flow over the high cliffs from their mountain homes, and fall like b. idal veils, with all the colors of the rainbow into the river below.

The crowning glory of the day soon revealed itself. As the haze of the morning was dissipated by the sun, all eyes were fixed on Mt. Hood, first the base, wrapped in white vapor and clouds appeared, then just above, the mountains took on a beautiful shade of blue; still above this the snow-capped peaks whiter than wool painted a scene more beautiful and impressive than pen can describe; this is one of the most noted peaks in the northwest, serving as a guide post to Lewis & Clark on their memorable expedition to the coast.

The shores of the Columbia river are lined with wheels for salmon catching which are so constructed they can be adjusted to the height of the river, and made to revolve by the current, bringing up in their buckets immense quantities of the lordly salmon. Some of these wheels are placed on large scows and anchored in the river.

Our trip of over one hundred miles, took us through the $3,000,000 locks by the Cascades, where we met a fine boat with a tremendous load of wheat returning from a long trip up the river. We were transferred to this boat and passed down through the locks. We soon found we were on a splendid and a fast boat burning oil. On going down to the engine room, all was quiet, no noise of shovel, but simply a stream or two of oil passing into the fire box and our boat moved on at great speed. The engineer told me that sixty barrels of oil at eighty cents per barrel was the amount required.

STOP AT TACOMA

Our next stop was at Tacoma, a bustling city of 45,000, its avenues and streets lined with artistic homes. Our trolley ride, I think, without exception, will remain a more vivid picture than any we took on our trip, for the reason that our guide was familiar with a complete history of its wonderfully rapid growth.

After hours of sight-seeing we were taken to a magnificent park, a veritable garden of roses, on the shore of Puget Sound. We were then taken on a power launch along many miles of wharves, mills and the largest smelter in the world, to which Alaska and even Mexico send their crude ores. The storehouses for the imported Oriental goods are tremendous, owned by the Windsor line of steamers.

We took the Flyer for Seattle, a distance of thirty miles across Puget Sound. The Flyer has two rows of plush car seats next to the large plate glass windows round the saloon, making a delightful observation steamer.

On approaching Seattle, we found a city set on a hill, while its wharves seemed limitless, with its line of steamers whose destination is the Orient, you feel as though standing on the threshold of Japan and China. We found that the Dakota, an immense steamer sailed for Japan with the peace commissioners that morning. The cargo was largely made up of locomotives and railroad material. As in war so in the arts of peace they will lead the Russian bear.

As one sees with his own eyes the development of these northwestern cities, the truism of Bishop Berkeley, was recalled, "Westward the Star of Empire takes its way." Some mysterious principle seems to be involved in this movement, while the globe revolves from west to east, humanity is constantly struggling against the motion and circuits the world from east to west.

The Review of Reviews.

Many other publications are desirable, and you may prefer this or prefer that fiction and art publication, but the Review of Reviews is necessary. Substantial American men and women are going to keep up with the times and they are going to take the shortest cut—which is the Review of Reviews. Twelve hundred pictures a year; departments giving the best there is in all the other important magazines all over the world; timely and informing articles, almost as fresh and full of news interest as a daily paper; and Dr. Albert Shaw's interpretation of the public men, events and issues of the month, in "The Progress of the World."

The Cosmopolitan.

A leading magazine for eighteen years. With the recent change of ownership it has been improved. It is far better in every respect, and aims to be the best in its field. Every year or so there's one notable advance in the forward movement among the many magazines. This year it is the Cosmopolitan. And this shall be a splendid permanent success. Its gains in news-stand sales and in subscriptions have been remarkable. And these are due only to the new life and real merit. The Cosmopolitan is printing WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT. It contains regularly the best fiction, best special articles on timely topics and best illustrations that money can buy.

Woman's Home Companion.

The Woman's Home Companion is for every member of the family. For our bright, earnest, cultured, home-loving American women it is an ideal entertainer and helper in a thousand congenial ways; but the fathers and brothers and sons join in its perusal by the fireside, and the children eagerly turn to the pages that are written for them.

The issues for the forth-coming year will be unique in conception, and execution, rich and varied in contents, and brilliant with the finest, most elaborate and artistic illustrations obtainable.

Enough said, You need no further introduction to these magazines. They are old friends with whom you are well acquainted.

Business propositions appeal to business people. This is a business proposition, and if those who read are business people, we shall expect to hear from them forthwith.

Don't wait. Remember this offer applies to renewals as well as new subscribers, and that the publishers of the magazines will not allow us to extend this offer but a few weeks.

Your name and address on the accompanying coupon, together with $3.25, entitles you to this offer if sent to the BETHEL NEWS before December 31.

TROLLEY RIDE IN SEATTLE.

Our trolley ride in Seattle was tremendously interesting, as a delegation from the Board of Trade accompanied us. John McGraw, the president, born in Penobscot county, Maine, first governor of Oregon, was particularly entertaining, taking us to Lake Washington, twenty-eight miles long, connected with a stream four miles long with Puget Sound. This is to be enlarged by the United States government so the largest vessels can pass into this fresh water lake where dry docks will be built. Many of the finest residences of Seattle are on the highlands, reached by cable cars. From the Scenic hotel, Mt. Washington, a fine view of snow-capped mountains, Rainier and Adams is obtained, but unfortunately heavy clouds hid them from our view.

We found our townsman, Harry O. Robinson, full of business in his capacity of civil engineer, telling us of a trip to Cascade mountains, where he walked through snow drifts on July 4; also of seeing $1,000,000 in gold bars from one mine in Alaska.

We left this most interesting city bidding adieu to the west, giving up our race with the sun and turning our faces toward the east.

Our first stop was to be at Minneapolis and St. Paul 2,000 miles away.

I can recall but one disappointment up to this time, the failure to see Mts. Rainier and Adams. Owing to forest fires even Tacoma could not reveal its namesake or Seattle its Rainier.

A short time after leaving, I noticed a freight caboose attached to the train. The conductor proved to be a live Tacoma boomer, and improvised a Morris chair on the upper seat for me, and said he would show me frequent views of the mountains, as showing how the rarified air as a medium for the vision annihilates space. When we were yet far away the mountains came into view, and our whole party enjoyed the changing tints on Rainier and Adams. Who can describe the splendor of such a scene, when the sun

"Goes swelling down the purple west,
Throws back to us his good-night kiss.
A rosy hush o'er all the scene
As Nature swoons with tranquil bliss."

One evening we passed the entrance to Yellowstone Park, with a "Thou art so near and yet so far" feeling we could only walk through the artistic railway station, as the park closed for the season two days before.

PASSED THE DIVIDE.

We passed the Great Continental Divide and the Indian Reservations. Many of the rivers as clear as the mountain springs from whence they flowed, take on dark and muddy colors as they pass on to the gulf.

We arrived at Minneapolis Sunday forenoon, having traveled since Thursday. This gives one some idea of the immense distance in crossing the continent. The day was superb. Our friend, W. H. Davis, formerly of Castine, Maine, gave us an automobile spin of thirty miles over the fine avenues of this beautiful city.

One locality of palatial homes attracted our attention, with the names of Pillsbury, Crosby, Washburn and Morrison, so familiar to Bangoreans. On a former visit I had the pleasure of a call at the residence, now occupied by Dr. Kimball and was shown the old family clock, and many other old time treasures brought from their ancestral home in Maine.

We rode to Lakes Harriet and Calhoun, where a most charming sight greeted our eyes; white winged yachts were flying over its blue surface, under the pressure of a northwester a seeming ocean within the limits of the city.

The afternoon we took the trolley for St. Paul, stopping on our way to take a rapid survey of the magnificent new capitol, rich in its wonderful variety of marble; thirty-six of its massive pillars cost $3,000 each, one of the fireplaces made of South African marble, seemed on fire with its own splendor of coloring.

Among its many paintings, one by LeFarge, of Moses receiving the law on Mt. Sinai, is very impressive, all the more so as we had so recently looked on our own Sinai's whose peaks, to the lover of nature represent altars before which men of all creeds can worship. Other panels were filled with Boshfield's most beautiful productions. We visited Como park and lake, where we found in this northwestern city a great variety of floral and landscape gardening. One pool contained more than a score of Victoria Regias in full bloom, with leaves measuring three feet across, while in the sunlight the glistening forms of hundreds of gold fish presented a picture of rare beauty. Crossing a rustic bridge, we saw a beautiful sloping hill, covered with a profusion of flowers, up whose sides a flight of floral steps led to a gate of flowers representing the "Gates Ajar," but in true western style these gates were wide open.

A JAPANESE GARDEN.

In another part of the park a Japanese garden with trees dwarfed in size, but centuries' old, also a badge of the United Commercial Travelers, in red rex begonia, a growing jewel flashing in the sun.

All Run Down

THIS is a common expression we hear on every side. Unless there is some organic trouble, the condition can doubtless be remedied. Your doctor is the best adviser. Do not dose yourself with all kinds of advertised remedies—get his opinion. More than likely you need a concentrated fat food to enrich your blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil

It is just such a food in its best form. It will build up the weakened and wasted body when all other foods fail to nourish. If you are run down or emaciated, give it a trial: it cannot hurt you. It is essentially the best possible nourishment for delicate children and pale, anaemic girls. We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Returning to St. Paul we walked through a portion of Summit avenue with its palatial homes. Conspicuous among them was James Hill's the railroad king of the northwest. Near this and built of the lime rock of Minnesota, is the residence of A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago and Great Western, a Maine man who will be remembered as a young man who read law with the late Josiah Crosby of Dexter. I confess to a little native pride when I think of such men, and also the cordial manner with which they met our party when they found we had come from the Pine Tree State. In the brief call we made at Chicago, we visited the stock exchange, several banks and the magnificent store of Marshall Field, with a drive in Lincoln Park. On our way we spent a few hours at Niagara, the sky cloudless, no wind to disturb the mist as it rose in clouds, every drop a prism through which the sun's rays passed, transforming the whole chasm, above, below, the very atmosphere into rain bow hues. The enthusiasm of our party, as we rode round the gorge, added much to the enjoyment of the scenery, so grand that it defies description.

At Toronto, we had a delightful trolley drive of two hours visiting a city of churches and many fine public buildings, City Hall with a tower 250 feet high, Parliament buildings and King Edward's Hotel, a magnificent building.

Our stop in Montreal was brief. We parted with our Canada, Massachusetts and New Hampshire traveling companions. Arriving in Portland we found it had lost none of its charms as we compared it with the cities of the Pacific. The ride to Bangor was delightful, the queen city of the east was arrayed in royal robes of autumn's richest colors, so beautiful that we could sincerely offer Naomi's prayer, "Thy people will be my people and thy God my God."

Croup, Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc., have no terrors for children or adults who evacuate the bowels with Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. This remedy expels all cold from the system and strengthens the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes. The Original Laxative Cough Syrup and Liquid Cold Cure. Sold by W. E. Bosserman. DW

JAPANESE GARDEN. Another part of the park is a garden with trees dwarfed by centuries' old, also a the United Commercial in red rex begonia, a jewel flashing in the sun.

Mexico. Great care is now being taken in the development of trade in Mexico, and capitalists are looking towards that country and its resources with greater interest each year. Not only is Mexico attractive from a trade standpoint, but as is well known, it is one of the most interesting countries in the world to visit during the winter months. To give all those who contemplate a trip to this wonderful southern country, (which any one who can afford the time and expense should do) the Grand Trunk Railway System are organizing a special excursion that will give the best opportunity to tourist and business men to cover the whole of Mexico.

This tour will leave Montreal in special Pullman sleeping cars on the morning of January 29th, connecting at Chicago with the special Pullman train that will leave there at 10.00 a.m., January 30th, proceeding south through St. Louis, San Antonio and Laredo into Mexico. The itinerary is made to include all of Mexico that is of interest to the traveler for extending the scope and time far beyond the lines and dates of the ordinary tour, making leisurely stays at the Capital and other important cities.

The tour will be under special escort and in charge of Mr. Reau Campbell, General Manager of the American Tourist Association, who is the best posted authority on Mexico in America and has accompanied like parties to that country every year for the past twenty-five years.

Another tour is in contemplation for the latter part of February. Write to J. Quinlan, Bonaventure Station, Montreal; and secure free literature, rates, etc.

Head About to Burst From Severe Bilious Attack.

"I had a severe bilious attack and felt like my head was about to burst when I got hold of a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I took a dose of them after supper and the next day felt like a new man and have been feeling happy ever since, says Mr. J. W. Smith of Julliff, Texas. For biliousness, stomach troubles and constipation these Tablets have no equal. Price 25 cents. For sale by W. E. Bosserman, Bethel; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel; E. L. Tebbets, Locke Mills; J. W. Of Interest to Mothers.

Thousands of little ones die every year of croup. Most of them could have been saved by a few doses of Honey and Tar, and every family with children should keep it in the house. It contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Mrs. George H. Pickett, San Francisco, Cal., writes: "My baby had a dangerous attack of croup and we thought she would choke to death, but one dose of Foley's Honey and Tar relieved her at once after other remedies had failed. We are never a minute without it in the house." Sold by W. E. Bosserman. F

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S.

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

ASHBURNHAM, Ont., April 18, 1903. —I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitations, being thankful to have found such a God-sent remedy. Respectfully yours, E. A. LANGFELDT, M. A., Rector of St. Luke's Church. To Chamberlain Medicine Co. This remedy is for sale by W. E. Bosserman, Bethel; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel; E. L. Tebbets, Locke Mills; J. W. Bennett, Gilead.

Two Kinds Excepted. He—You know they say a woman can't keep a secret.
She—That's a libel. A woman can keep a secret as easily as a man can—all but two kinds. There are secrets that aren't worth keeping and others that are too good to keep.—Stray Stories.

Doing Things in Style. Knicker—So the son of the wealthy contractor is learning the business from the bottom?
Bocker—Yes, he has started in as a hod carrier, only he insists on carrying the bricks in a suit case.—N. Y. Sun.

Theories Upset by Experience. "No man can do anything against his will," said a metaphysician.
"Can't he, though?" exclaimed Banks. "Don't I get up at seven o'clock against my will?"—Stray Stories.

Substitute Wanted. The demand for rubber in the automobile industry is making the prize which awaits the discoverer of a cheap substitute for the natural gum great and tempting. So far, however, invention has been baffled in that direction.

Money in Bogs. Experts calculate that Irish bogs are capable of turning out 50,000,000 tons of fuel a year for 1,000 years, and if this were sold it would bring in $60,000,000 a year.

Expensive Lectures. Recently Sir William Crookes lectured twice at Kimberley, South Africa, on the making of artificial diamonds. The lectures cost $3,000, for they included elaborate experiments.

On the Poor List. Twenty-two persons out of every 1,000 in England and Wales were in receipt of poor relief at the end of July.

Biggest Blast. One of the record blasts was recently set off at Bonwae, near Oban, when 24,000 pounds of gunpowder moved about 250,000 tons of rock.

WIT AND WISDOM.

As the artisan bringeth forth the beauty in the diamond, so doth experience reveal the loveliness of the soul.

Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is simply liquid electricity. It goes to every part of your body, bringing new blood, strength and new vigor. It makes you well and keeps you well. 35 cents. W. E. Bosserman.

Missionary enthusiasm is not merely faith confidence in His word; missionary enthusiasm is love for mankind inspired by and touched with a divine fire; and where this power of the Spirit of God is there that missionary enthusiasm manifests itself in irresistible energy and efficacy.

"Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is the best remedy for that often fatal disease—croup. Has been used with success in our family for eight years."—Mrs L. Withacre, Buffalo, N. Y. *

You may say the right word in the wrong tone, you may preach the gospel as if it were a curse.

Heavy, impure blood makes a muddy, pimply complexion, headaches, nausea, indigestion. Thin blood makes you weak, pale, sickly. Burdock Blood Bitters makes the blood rich, red, pure—restores perfect health.

We should be perfect in all we do, not merely for the present, but to help in the formation of good character. We should not be like the soapstone, that crumbles as it is rubbed, but like gold, that shines brighter and brighter the more it is used.

For a mild, easy action of the bowels, a single dose of Doan's Regulators is enough. Treatment cures habitual constipation. 25 cents a box. Ask your druggist for them. *

One secret act of self denial, one sacrifice of inclination to duty, is worth all the mere good thoughts, warm feelings, passionate prayers, in which some people indulge themselves.

Beautifying methods that injure the skin and health are dangerous. Be beautiful without discomfort by taking Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. Sunshine faces follow its use. 35 cents. W. E. Bosserman.

Ill fortune never crushes that man whom good fortune deceived not.

Clear thinking, decisive action, vim and vigor of body and mind, the sparkle of life, come to all who use Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. W. E. Bosserman.

In the glorious likeness of Christ thou wilt be made rich and find all the solace and sweetness in the world.

Bethel Boy Promoted.

The many friends of Mr. George French, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. French, will be pleased to learn of promotion to the position of general manager of the Maine Publishing Company of Augusta. At the recent annual meeting of that company, Mr. French elected one of the directors and the general manager. Mr. George M. Twitchell was chosen.

Years ago Mr. French entered the employ of the company practical. An office boy and by force of his own worth he has reached the important position he now holds. He yet a boy at home, Mr. French manifested those qualities which make for success. He was a hard worker; did not waste his time; took advantage of the opportunity which good society, the church, school and Young People's Society, good literature, the school and the Academy offered to develop himself up a strong character, so when he left home he was well prepared, was strong in purposeful character of mind and character, and ready to take up the work which he began his work at the bottom ladder but with a determination to reach the top. He was not those boys who was afraid to get little dirt on his hands, nor was he looking for a soft job in the noon hour, but rather was one to take up cheerfully and with any work assigned him and do the best of his ability.

His desire to particularly emphasize success as an incentive to young men and as an example of what good, hard conscientious work with character behind it, can accomplish.

Pie Supper.

Without poetry, music, or flies, a meal cannot live without pie. It is obliged to, he becomes needed. Therefore "pie" means from a culinary standpoint, shall expect the cultured of Bethel—i. e. the whole of course—to attend our "Pie in Pattee Hall, to-morrow at the usual supper hour. Did you say? "Pie may be a crust means in, or appendicitis?" Still will cry, "Give me liberty (pie) or give me death!" even famous exclamation may mean, "Give me liberty or give me death!" But who's about a "pie-crust" supper. We aint. We said "Pie" Of course, every rose has its thorns, and every pie has its crust. If it hadn't, it would be a pie, but a pudding. If you feel that way about your stomach feels about it, you needn't eat it, you can have it, or leave it that we are particular about giving is the pie plate and cents; that is the price of a pie, with or without the kind of pies?" Well, you see the lines of the old song, "make a cherry pie, Billy boy, boy."

Make a cherry pie, charming Billy! Only can, and she will, if she cherries. She will also custard pies, "pumpkin" pies, and you will find pies such other used to make, and as your wife makes—when they are for company.

A saving your money for "Not your cake?" This twenty-five cents out of the "ways and department of your kitchen" and it will be wisely invested. HANOVER.

The piano, for which the ladies of Hanover have been working since the first of October was installed in Union Hall last Thursday. It is a Cote and seems to be a fine instrument for the amount paid for it. Over $100.00 has been earned towards the piano in the two months.

A twelve o'clock dance was held at Union Hall, Friday evening for the benefit of the piano fund. It was quite a success, both socially and financially. Many thanks are due Mrs. O. F. Twitchell and Messrs. Howe and Wheelwright who furnished the music, free of charge.

A Moonlight Adventure

STORY OF THE CYCLAMEN BLOSSOMS.

DO YOU know Talliores? If your kind fates have ever taken you there and you have once made the tour of the lakes, you will certainly remember the green, silent corner, back against the mountain where the village sleeps, continually lulled by the pine trees.

Directly below the lake spreads its blue waters, smiling in golden ripples, and flecked here and there with white, triangular sails. The intense light, filtered by the fleecy clouds, illuminates brightly the circle of mountains which surrounds the water.

The many shades of green, the somber blue, the vivid violet and the silvery grays of the mountains mingle in wondrous harmonies with the turquoise of the lake and the brilliant green of the vines. It is there that one should go to taste the joy of required love, and still more truly it is the place where a bitter sorrow may find surcease in peace.

Not long ago, on the mountain road, I met three tourists descending, with their alpenstocks and knapsacks and their hats decorated with bunches of cyclamen blossoms. I watched them pass with a wistful glance, while memories of the distant days when I, too, was 20, filled my brain.

I saw myself gayly descending the same road, my hat decked with flowers, accompanied by two merry companions, and even as the crests of the mountains were reflected in the water, so the remembrances of former times rose before me, clear and sharp as a mirage, with all the colors, the perfumes and the enthusiasms of youth.

It happened 25 years ago in this village, where we had planned to spend the night after a long day's climb. Scarcely had we turned down the beautiful avenue of chestnut trees when we saw, walking slowly toward us, in the soft shade of the trees, a beautiful young girl, radiant in all the glory and splendor of her 18 years.

Tall, admirably formed, her thick golden curls fell in clouds about her wonderful shoulders, and as she turned at the sound of our voices, we caught sight of a finely cut patrician profile, with proud, red lips and haughtily inquiring dark eyes.

We fell in love with her at once, all three of us, and, forgetful of the fatigues of the day, we followed her discreetly along a winding path until she disappeared beneath a gateway of drooping honeysuckle. Upon our return to the inn we learned that the stranger who had so excited our admiration was Princess V., a Russian, who lived with her parents in one of the villas that bordered on the lake.

Russian, a princess and pretty—that was enough surely to set our imaginations working, and all through dinner we made impossible plans to waylay our new divinity and accost her. My two companions, however, were too sleepy to do anything but go to bed that night. I had no desire to follow their example. Instead, I strolled sauntering down the road, looking inquiringly behind every tree as I went.

It was an exquisite evening. The full moon had risen behind the mountains and pierced their somber depths with arrows of silver light. Everywhere, through the sleeping country, the crickets were chirping, with here and there the note of a low-flying swallow.

At my feet the lake, with its pathway of molten ripples, murmured caressingly to the tiny beach. I threw myself down on the soft grass and began to invent romantic incidents which should bring about my meeting with the Russian princess.

As I built my elaborate castles in Spain I heard the metallic click of a boat chain beneath the willows at my side, and presently, not five steps away, a white form emerged from the shadow into the moonlight. It was the beautiful Russian.

She was trying to unfasten the boat, a task for which her slender fingers were in no wise fitted. Finally she straightened up with an angry sigh and kicked the heavy chain petulantly.

"Oh, dear, what a nuisance!" she sighed.

"My opportunity had come.

"Allow me," I cried, starting forward suddenly, and, kneeling, I freed the boat, although not without considerable injury to my knuckles and fingers.

She jumped into the boat and then looked at me inquiringly.

I had just spent a week in the mountains tramping in all weathers, sleeping wherever I happened to be, and my clothes showed the strain to which they had been put. My beard was long and neglected, my hat in tatters and my coat badly torn. It was evident that she took me for a boatman.

"Thanks," she said "carelessly, "can you row me as far as Duint?"

"With the greatest pleasure," I replied, forgetful of everything except the golden opportunity for which I had been sighing.

I jumped after her into the boat and, striking far out from shore, began to row, while she sat facing me with the rudder-strings in her hand. The moonlight shone full on her lovely face, at once haughty and mischievous, framed in its wealth of glittering curls. From their place in her corsage a bunch of cyclamen blossoms made the air sweet with their penetrating perfume.

"I have wanted to do this for a long time," said the princess, as if in explanation, "but my aunt hates the water and Miss Gray is as foolish as a cat about it, so I made up my mind to come alone, and I would have been well on my way now if it had not been for that miserable chain."

He voice was low and as sweet as the flowers she wore. Absorbed in my admiration of her, I said nothing, but continued to row.

"So, you see, you came just in time," she went on, "but you must not think I shall not pay you for your trouble."

She took a dainty portemonnaie from her pocket as she spoke, but I hastened to stop her.

"You are too good, fraulein," I said, "but I am not a boatman, and I assure you that the pleasure of being of service to you is the greatest reward I could have."

She raised her head quickly, and I saw a frown gather on her white brow.

"Who are you, then?" she asked, in an irritated tone.

"A tourist fresh from a week's tramp in the mountains," I answered.

Her forehead cleared, and I saw a smile play about the corners of her mouth.

"Ah," she said, "in that case I must make my excuse for my indiscretion. Miss Gray would certainly call this a most improper proceeding."

Her eyes danced wickedly, but she continued hastily:

"If you please, we will return at once to the shore."

She gave a pull to the rudder strings and the boat swung about, although I pulled as leisurely as I dared. On the other side of the lake the silver moonbeams turned to ruddy gold where a shepherd's glowing fire was reflected in the water.

"Have you been up Mont Blanc?" inquired the young princess, who, probably assured from my manner that I was to be trusted, decided to be agreeable and break the silence.

"I have just come from there," I replied, tramped back through the mountains," I replied.

"Then you knew our lake before. Is it not beautiful?"

"Very, especially just now."

"Oh, but it is wonderful at every time," she answered impetuously. "It is so blue and limpid and transparent that it seems as if it were continually inviting you to plunge down to its very depths. I love it. I love the water."

And she dipped her bare arms in the silvery ripples that knocked softly against the sides of the boat.

"Probably you are a water nymph," I said slowly, as I watched her in awe of admiration.

"I wish I were," she replied gayly. "You know there are some here, for this is a lake of legends and spirits."

"Really?" I asked.

"Yes, indeed. The villagers say that just where we are now there is a whole city buried beneath the waves because the inhabitants refused to give hospitality to an old beggar, who was really a disguised fairy. When the moon is full the corks in the submerged village creak at the bottom of the lake and the church bells ring as if for mass. Listen! Can't you hear something now like the soft, distant ringing of bells?"

She leaned over the side of the boat as if listening to something below the waves, even as she smiled at her own fancying.

"Did you hear anything?" she repeated.

I stopped rowing and knelt obediently beside her, so near that our two heads almost touched. To have remained there I would have sworn and believed anything she chose, and indeed it did seem to me that I heard a vague, delicious, dream music.

Perhaps it was nothing more than the beating of my heart, for it was throbbing violently to be so near to the beautiful princess with the golden hair and the wonderful eyes. The soft odor of the cyclamen blossoms was intoxicating.

"Hush," she whispered, with a mysterious air, laying her finger on her rosy lips, "the fairy of the lake is calling us!"

In the silence of the night floated a distant sound of a hunting horn. It was easy to believe that it came from below the water.

"Oh, dear, no," she cried, laughing at the sight of my credulous face and wide open eyes. "I'm afraid we can't make it anything more than this, after all!"

"Not at all," I exclaimed, fervently. "You are the fairy of the lake, and you can lend to it any enchantment that you please! It becomes immediately all that you say!"

She laughed merrily again, and I bent to my oars, so that we soon reached the boathouse below the willows. Through the vista in the trees I caught sight of an elegant villa, the turrets gleaming in the moonlight.

Suddenly a dark form emerged from the wide balcony and a thin voice called:

"Nadia, Nadia! You must come in now. You will certainly catch cold."

"It is my aunt," murmured Nadia; "I don't know about my catching cold, but I am sure to catch a scolding if I do not hurry. Thanks, and good night. Will you be so good as to fasten the boat again? Since you are not a boatman, I cannot pay for my passage, but I am anxious to clear my debt."

She appeared to think for a moment, and then, abruptly pulling the cyclamen blossoms from her belt, she tossed them to me, crying:

"Farewell! Keep these flowers in memory of the fairy of the lake!"

The next moment she had disappeared beneath the dark shadows of the trees, and I never saw her again.

A LITTLE WHILE.

Be it loss or cross, be it birth or bier,
Time's wing is fleet. No smile nor tear
Stays the passing of a year
In a little while.

A little while,
A day, an hour, it is joy that thou hast!
Look to no future, nor to thy past;
Rejoice in to-day! It will only last
In a little while.

A little while,
Is sorrow thine? Is it night with thee?
Wait, wait! Light cometh to thee and me.
At dawn of the great eternity,
In a little while!

THE HUMAN HARP.

It Has Many Strings and Gives Forth Sweet Melodies as Well as Discordant Sounds.

Human life might appropriately be denominated a harp of many strings, visible and invisible, capable of giving forth sweetest melodies, or, if out of tune, discordant sounds. These strings are those of the senses, the eye, ear, etc., upon which the divine musician plays indirectly through the medium of our natural environment. When properly attuned, there are presented to us visions of fragrant flowers, blue skies, and landscapes of beauty; are heard the music of singing birds, laughing brook, and the voices of loving friends—in a word we live in a world sparkling with beauty and teeming with happiness. If out of tune, just the opposite is true. Now we behold a world in which leaden skies, darker days, etc., are in the majority—a world in which self-centered spirits would seem to be justified in turning "prophets of despondency and complaint," and re-echoing the words of that New York politician, who, standing at the close of a misspent life, has recently exclaimed: "It is not worth the while." "Having eyes they see not, and ears they hear not."

The visible strings are those of memory, will, consciousness, etc., upon which the divine musician plays directly. When in tune, all about us may be seen the sunshine of lives filled with peace of mind, joy of heart, and contentment of life, who find constant delight in uttering kind words and performing kind acts and deeds. To them the world is indeed bright, joyous and happy. Others there are (what a pity there are so many) whose experience is just the opposite of this. As they see it, the world is full of selfish, grasping monsters, ready to take every advantage of their fellows. It is a case of every man's hand being against his neighbor. As a result of this experience, disappointment, unrest, inquietude of soul, are ever to the fore, indicated by expressions of disappointment, premature lines of care, and memories crowded with untoward events.

To which of these two classes do you belong? If to the latter, your harp is sadly out of tune, and your sole contribution to the world will be that which shall make for the world's impoverishment. Submit your harp to the divine musician, and, instead of beholding discouraging sights and scenes, and hearing discordant notes, you shall behold new beauties in the world about you; your soul shall be filled with the music of harmonious sounds—you will be happier and the world will be richer because you have lived in it.—Rev. A. R. Lambert, in N. W. Christian Advocate.

Whisky in Church Walls.

Concealed somewhere in the old Presbyterian church at Fairton, Pa., there is said to be a bottle of whisky at least 100 years old. When the edifice was being built, it is said, the workmen struck for whisky, which in those days seemed to be a necessity. A quart was furnished them, but, according to Hosea Husted, then an apprentice, the liquor was so "strong" that the men couldn't drink it, but buried it in the walls. Robert Westcott, who relates the incident, says the bottle is still there.

Morocco Slave Market.

In Marrakesh (Morocco City) the slave market is held three times a week in the two hours that precede the setting of the sun and the closing of the city gates. The market place is an open space of bare, dry ground hemmed in with walls and with a rulous arcade stretching along the center. The wealthy patrons seat themselves on the ground and the auctioneer, after a prayer to Allah, marches his wares round and round the inclosure, receiving bids as he goes.

Herrings in Battle.

The battle of the herrings was the comical name given to a fight between an English force and a French detachment not far from Orleans in 1429. The English were conveying a large quantity of supplies, mainly herrings, for it was Lent, to the army that was besieging Orleans. The English had 3,600 men, the French 6,000. The former repulsed the assaults and saved the herrings, so the battle was named in honor of the supplies.

Carload of Ants.

The Clyde Steamship company brought a carload of ants to port a few days ago from New York. The ants were of a peculiar variety, found in Central America, and said to be destructive to the boll weevil, the great enemy of the cotton plant. The insects were shipped in glass tubes, properly encased. The ants will be distributed through the southwest, where they are needed, from New Orleans.—Charleston Post.

Little indigestion naturally ensues; the kidneys become clogged with impurities that impair or stop their secretory functions; the blood is vitiated and its natural ending and the sure result is death. The one medicine that will arrest this fatal progress is

In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2625 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says:

"For two years I had kidney trouble, and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism, but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine, but Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.
